

of her own at Saas Fee; her audacious attempt to take a street-scene during a snow-storm resulted in one of the most remarkable photographs in the Exhibition; the brilliant portrait of 'Clara' was no less successful. We note with interest that Miss Morse's one contribution, a view of Mont Blanc, was taken from the summit of the Grépon.

The Club is as usual indebted to Mr. Spencer for taking charge of all the arrangements connected with the Exhibition, including the hanging. It is hardly necessary to say that he carried out the task, as always, with perfect skill and success; we must, however, add, that for the first time for many years he was not himself a contributor, the reason being, not that his interest in Alpine scenes is flagging—far from it—but that he has taken up another and more arduous mode of representing them.

THE ALPINE CLUB LIBRARY.

The following books, etc., have been added to the Library:—

Alpine Journal. Index to vols. 16–34. A complete index to the above vols. has been compiled by Mr. A. J. Mackintosh, covering some 700 typewritten sheets. One continuous list has been made of subjects, authors, peaks, etc. Expeditions are entered alphabetically under the names of those who took part, with dates and routes: and chronologically under the names of peaks, etc.—again with routes and dates and names of climbers. There are a number of special headings, such as: Accidents, Old age climbing, Solitary, Youth. The entries under such a heading as Mont Blanc give a nearly complete history of ascents, dates, climbers, bibliography, routes, etc.

Campbell, O. W. Shelley and the unromantics.

London, Methuen, 1924

p. 142 : During the summer of 1816 the glorious Swiss scenery profoundly thrilled him, 'with excess of satisfied astonishment.' But here also the power and peace and grandeur of which the mountains spoke seemed infinitely remote, and almost hostile to the vacillating human heart; and he seems to have looked upon them with something of dread—a place where ‘Power dwells apart in its tranquillity,

Remote, serene, and inaccessible.’

But he had realised that all these manifestations of nature’s might were meaningless in themselves, for he ends his poem to Mont Blanc by asking:

‘And what were thou, and earth and stars and sea,
If to the human mind’s imaginings
Silence and solitude were vacancy?’

These plates are from photographs taken by W. Mittelholzer in an aeroplane. This new point of view requires some study before one is able to interpret the scenes. About half of the pictures are of the High Alps and are most interesting. All parts of Switzerland and of Mont Blanc are represented. One of the most interesting views shows the Mer de Glace and the two glaciers which form it, in their whole length, showing the medial moraine from the base of the Aig. du Tacul becoming a lateral moraine of the Mer de Glace. There are 13 reproductions of old maps from 1578, which show that the old representation of mountain country was an attempt to take the bird’s-eye point of view.

Pp. 7-8: 'He was introduced to rock climbing by his sons when staying at Wastdale in 1906. Although then nearly 50 years of age, he took it up with whole-hearted enthusiasm and with a success surprising in a man of his years and unathletic habits. He had previously visited Switzerland with his family, and there enjoyed both skiing and tobogganing, but he cared little for these once he learned the joys of rock climbing, and from 1906 till the outbreak of war his holidays, whenever possible, were spent among the Cumberland mountains, with occasional visits to Wales and the Isle of Skye. He loved the comradeship of a mountaineering party and the struggle with difficulties and triumphs which were shared in common.'

Note.—The editor, 'J. G. C.' of H. M. Atkins' Ascent of Mont Blanc, 1838, is given in the Alpine Club Library Catalogue as J. G. Children. This is evidently a mistake, for 'J. G. C.' writes that Atkins was his nephew and Atkins' mother was Anne Cooke, daughter of John Cooke of Hothorpe. The editor should, therefore, be J. G. Cooke, not Children.

Note from Timbs' Curiosities of London, c. 1854. A. Smith's lecture on Mont Blanc in the Egyptian Hall in two seasons was represented 528 times, once privately to Prince Consort: up to 1854, 192,929 persons attended: the largest audience was 471: £17,000 was taken, of which only one half-crown was bad. ## PROCEEDINGS OF THE ALPINE CLUB.

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Club was held in the Hall, 23 Savile Row, London, W. 1, on Monday, December 4, 1923, at 8.30 P.M., Brig.-Gen. The Hon. C. G. Bruce, C.B., M.V.O., President, in the Chair.

The following candidates were balloted for and elected Members of the Club, namely, Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, Bart., Mr. Alfred Joseph Clark, Mr. Ernest Kidder Lindley, Mr. Ivor Armstrong Richards, Mr. Hugh Frederick Bower Sharp, and Mr. Eustace Thomas.

The PRESIDENT, in accordance with the provisions of Rule 29, there being no other candidates, declared the following Members nominated by the Committee to be duly elected as Officers of the Club and Members of Committee for 1924:
