Contributors

David Broadhead is a schoolteacher in Inverness. He has had 16 years living and mountaineering in Scotland, four Alpine seasons, and has climbed in Pakistan, Greenland, the Pyrenees, Nepal, Sri Lanka, India, the USA, the Soviet Union, Scandinavia and Papua New Guinea.

Hamish Brown has made 18 visits to Morocco. His recent books include The Great Walking Adventure, drawing on his world-wide expeditions, two poetry anthologies, and a volume of his own poems. He lives in Scotland.

Ken Crocket is Editor of the Scottish Mountaineering Club Journal. He has made over 60 first ascents in Scotland, and has climbed in the Alps and N America. His books include Ben Nevis – Britain's Highest Mountain, 1986.

Mal Duff was born, of Scottish parents, below Mt Kenya, and his adaptation to risk and altitude was instilled at the age of two. His expeditions include the NE ridge of Everest, the Muztagh Tower, Lhotse Shar and Ben Nevis.

Evelio Echevarría was born in Santiago, Chile, and teaches Hispanic literature at Colorado State University. He has climbed in N and S America, and has contributed numerous articles to Andean, N American and European journals.

Andy Fanshawe is National Officer of the British Mountaineering Council. His achievements include the first ascent of the W ridge route on El Obispo and the first solo ascent of Monja Grande. He was elected to the ACG in 1986.

Paul Fatti is Professor of Statistics at Witwatersrand University and President of the Mountain Club of South Africa. He has led expeditions to Baffin Island and the Himalaya. First ascents include the E face of the Central Tower of Paine.

Ronald Faux is a specialist on The Times who has covered three Everest expeditions: 1976 (British–Nepalese Army), 1978 (Messner-Habeler) and 1986 (British NE ridge). He is an author and active climber, sailor, skier and pilot.

Jerry Gore joined the Royal Marines as an officer in 1981. He has completed new routes in Britain, Iceland, Arctic Norway, the French Alps, India, Nepal, Peru, America and Canada. He is currently reading Human Physiology at Loughborough University.

Dennis Gray has been Secretary of the British Mountaineering Council since 1976. His autobiography Rope Boy was published by Gollancz. He has been on four expeditions to the Himalaya and one to the Andes and has made many first ascents.

Ashley Greenwood OBE, MC, was born in 1912. He is an ex-President of CUMC (1933) and of the Uganda Mountain Club, and was an instructor for wartime mountain schools in Scotland and Iceland. He has climbed extensively in many countries.

Lindsay Griffin, after early climbing in the Alps, nowadays specializes in 'exploratory mountaineering'. His trips are lightweight, alpine-style, and he has made many first ascents and quite a number of solo ascents and excursions.

Brian Hall works as a mountain guide, photographer, lecturer and climbing consultant. He has made many ascents in the Alps, and has been on expeditions to Patagonia, Bolivia, Peru, Jannu, Nuptse, Baltoro Kangri, Everest, Ogre II, Makalu/Chamlang and K2.

J G R Harding is a solicitor. He served in the Welsh Guards (1952–4), in the Colonial Service in South Arabia (1959–65) and was resident in Australia (1969–70). He has been on 60 expeditions in Europe, Asia, Africa and Australasia.

Lew Hardy PhD is a lecturer in the Psychology of Sport at the University College of North Wales, Bangor. His research publications are mostly on stress effects upon performance. He is a member of the Association of British Mountain Guides.

A N Husbands went on his first Alpine Meet at Arolla with the Climbers' Club in 1947. Since then he has traversed all the peaks in the Zermatt area and has also climbed in the Oberland and Mont Blanc regions.

Michael Jardine is fluent in Chinese and Japanese, and works in Tokyo. He counts as his greatest achievement 'an epic winter ascent (and ski descent) of ice-bound Mt Fuji in gale-force winds, a feat equalled only by several thousand Japanese'.

Harish Kapadia is a cloth merchant by profession. He has climbed and trekked in the Himalaya since 1960, with ascents up to 6800m. He is at present Honorary Assistant Editor of the Himalayan Journal, and Compiler of the HC Newsletter.

Bill King works for Telecoms New Zealand. He has climbed extensively throughout New Zealand (with four routes on Mt Cook), and has participated in the NZ Antarctic Research Programme and in NZ expeditions to the Andes, Nepal and the Pamirs.

Edward P Leahy is a Professor of Geography at East Carolina University where he specializes in Latin-America.

Pete Leeming is a science teacher in Leeds. In the Alps he rates the Bregaglia as his favourite area and the Droites NE spur as his most enjoyable route. He has visited the Peruvian Andes twice.

Rudolf Loewy is an industrial engineer, management consultant and lecturer. He has climbed in the Eastern Alps, Bernina and Pennine Alps, and made one minor first ascent with Menlove Edwards.

Peter Molnar's life has focused on mountains since the age of nine, when his parents took him to the Rockies. His research is directed towards understanding the physical processes that create, shape and ultimately destroy mountain ranges.

John Nixon is a geography teacher at Hermitage Comprehensive School, Chester-le-Street. He has had four Alpine seasons, and has led expeditions to the Himalaya and Karakoram.

Paul Nunn PhD is Principal Lecturer in Economic History at Sheffield City Polytechnic. His numerous climbs include first ascents of the British Route on Pik Shchurovsky and the SW Pillar of Asgard. He has been on nine Himalayan expeditions.

Oswald Oelz is an internist at the University Hospital, Zürich, with a special interest in high-altitude physiology and medicine. His climbs include the first ascent of the Messner Couloir on Mount McKinley, Mount Everest, Shishapangma and Vinson Massif.

Roger Payne has an honours degree in Education. He started alpine climbing in 1977, and his first expedition (Alaska) was in 1982. When not organizing or participating in an expedition, he guides in Britain and the Alps.

Sir Edward Peck was in the Diplomatic Service until 1975, when he retired to Tomintoul. He has climbed in the Alps, Turkey, Kulu, Borneo and East Africa. His object when serving abroad was generally to reach the highest point available.

Iain Peters started climbing at nine with his grandfather, the late Admiral K N Lawder. He has made 120 new routes in the West Country, and is the author of a forthcoming CC guide to N Devon and Cornwall.

Kev Reynolds has climbed in the Atlas, the Alps and extensively in the Pyrenees. For many years a Youth Hostel Warden, he is now a freelance writer and lecturer.

Simon Richardson is a petroleum engineer. He has derived greatest pleasure from climbs where the outcome has been uncertain, such as a new route on Taulliraju in Peru and a storm-ridden ascent of the E face of the Grandes Jorasses.

Ksenija Rozman (PhD 1965) is an art historian and Keeper at the Narodna Galerija, Ljubljana. She specializes in Slovenian medieval frescos and European art of the 18th and 19th centuries.

C A Russell, who works with a City bank, devotes much of his spare time to mountaineering and related activities. He has climbed in many regions of the Alps, in the Pyrenees and in East Africa.

Malcolm Sales has been regularly climbing in the British Isles and other parts of Europe for the past 21 years. He has helped to run Scout expeditions to Norway and the Pyrenees. He frequently visits Scotland for the winter climbing.

A V Saunders, an architect by profession, was taken up by alpinism at the age of 27, and remembers that Marco Pallis began in his thirties, and that Andrzej Zawada led his first Himalayan expedition when he was 40.

Michael Scott works for the Shell Company. He has been on expeditions to the Cordillera Blanca, the Cordillera Paine and Baffin Island, and was in 1976 the only person to have climbed all the 640 routes on Table Mountain.

Phil Thornhill has had assorted jobs from chocolate packer to hospital porter. He is a pioneer on SE sea-cliffs, and specializes in back-roped solos of routes such as 'Interstellar Overdrive' (Ben Nevis) and Central Couloir (Grandes Jorasses).

Diana Tyson has worked and walked in many countries. She holds a doctorate in French, regularly publishes scholarly research, and is a serious amateur violinist.

Ted Whalley is a research chemist who works for the National Research Council of Canada. His extensive climbing experience includes many first ascents on Baffin Island and Ellesmere Island. He was President of the ACC, 1980–84.

Michael Wiedman is a surgeon. He has been team doctor on two Tibetan Mount Everest expeditions, conducting high-altitude medical research on cerebral oedema and predictive retinal haemorrhages. He is returning to Annapurna in 1987 and N Everest in 1990.

Readers may be interested in subscribing to MOUNTAIN. There are six issues each year. For subscription details send to Mountain Magazine Limited, P.O. Box 184, Sheffield S11 9DL, England.

HIMAVANTA is India's only mountaineering monthly. Subscription details can be obtained from Dasarathi Sarkar, 63E Mohanirban Road, Calcutta 700029, India.